All Psychology programs offered by JCU Singapore are accredited by the Australian Psychology Accreditation Council (APAC). Therefore, an individual who intends to apply into any accredited psychology course in an Australian University must have their qualifications assessed by the Australian Psychological Society (APS), unless the individual graduated from an APAC accredited undergraduate 4-year program.

The Australian Psychological Society is the national assessing authority in Australia for assessment of overseas academic qualifications in psychology for the purpose of migration. They determine the level at which an applicant's qualification are equivalent to an Australian program of study that has been accredited by the Society. Therefore, all applicants who do not have an APAC or APS accredited certificate must send their certificates and transcripts for assessment. The assessment may take up to 8 weeks and a fee of A$615.00 will be payable.
